Hi Tim

16:58:38 From Dean Grimes TX to Everyone:

Hello Tim

16:59:22 From Billy Burt - Alamo City, Texas to Everyone:
I mentioned Antique Oil last week... that Economy Bowl has an Antique Oil finish

16:59:35 From Billy Burt - Alamo City, Texas to Everyone:
The Pine Platter is Deft Gloss

17:00:21 From Andy Schuster to Everyone:
I do like Antique oil. first 2 coats thinned, then a couple of straight.

17:00:55 From Billy Burt - Alamo City, Texas to Everyone:
I stopped at 3 coats of Antique Oil because I didn't want it glossy

17:01:53 From Doug Miller in Kentucky to Everyone:
Finish
Abrasive paste and wax for quick, satin finish
For gloss, sanded out to 320 then sanding sealer followed by high gloss lacquer, 4 coats then sanded, repeat 4-5 times until I get total coverage at the gloss I'm after.

17:12:32 From Kade Bolger, Woodturner to Everyone:
success ☐ ☐ ...he's pooped.

17:12:55 From brenda thornton greenville ohio to Everyone:

17:40:04 From SteveDurham to Everyone:

what type of finish would go over the top?

17:42:06 From Kade Bolger, Woodturner to Everyone:

Steve, a high gloss finish really sets it off. But the wood finish needs to be flawless or the shine will magnify all your imperfections.☐ Cheers.

17:42:14 From Doug's iPad Mini4 to Everyone:

I use General's charcoal white which easily comes off canvas after dots are dry

17:46:31 From Doug's iPad Mini4 to Everyone:

How do you correct a mistake on wood? I have rubberized tools to remove from canvass but don't know how to on wood

17:47:19 From Randall Smith to Everyone:

Although the rods are round, I think you could change the shape to triangles, or any shape desired.

17:48:25 From Doug's iPad Mini4 to Everyone:

If two dots bleed or meld and you want to separate, how do you correct?

17:54:03 From Doug's iPad Mini4 to Everyone:

Matt: what do you use to seal?

17:59:17 From Steve Lackscheide to Everyone:

Nifty idea and great demo, Matt. Thanks!

Enjoyed very much. Great answers to all the questions.

18:02:27 From Matt Harber to Everyone:
Some of the available tools are oval, leave an oval "dot".

18:02:27 From Randall Smith to Everyone:
If you sanded the end of a rod at an angle, you would get an ellipse

18:03:09 From Tommy Schutz to Everyone:
Excellent demo Matt, thanks for the knowledge share
