17:49:01 From Scott Hampton:
Woohoo... storm currently moving through my area here in central California. ☐

17:55:18 From Scott Hampton:
Now this is just my opinion... I use a Shopsmith and I never cut wood in tablesaw mode without the guard in place. I've been witness to accidents of woodworkers loosing fingers and major hand injuries due to the saw guard not being in place. Again, this is my opinion.

17:58:41 From Scott Hampton:
Although it's not really an accident. It's operator error, as these injuries all could have been avoided with the saw guard in place.

18:48:09 From Heather-Spiritwynd Wood Stone and Bone:
what is green ash like to turn? does it crack like other woods when drying?

18:49:01 From Doug Miller:
Works well to twice turn

18:49:11 From Matt Harber:
Depends on where the pith is, if it's in the wood. Ash CAN crack when drying..... but I've successfully turned wet ash, too.

18:51:55 From Heather-Spiritwynd Wood Stone and Bone:
thanks Matt. I just had a bunch of really big pieces given to me. had to be cut down due to the emerald ash borer.

18:53:07 From Matt Harber:
You're welcome, Heather. The infestation started near me, and all my ash is long dead. I haven't seen any in years. It's great wood for turning and making things from. Also, it takes light scorching well, because of the grain.

18:55:34 From Heather-Spiritwynd Wood Stone and Bone:

nice! I have to make a bowl for the guy who gave it to me. pieces are around 14-18" Dia. cut in blanks and sealed already
