Cap'n - I was watching one of your YouTube videos (165 self powered sander and more) and at the end of the video you quickly went over how to make a texturing tool (with a single burr and ball bearings). Can you go over how you made them in a bit more detail sometime? I am particularly interested in the order in which you assemble the parts. I know there is a magnet, 1 or 2 ball bearing disks (not sure if it's 1 or 2) a copper sleeve and a single burr.

16:20:06 From Matt Harber - goblets & more to Everyone:
Check out one of the segments from last week's meeting, one of the members showed his tool and went over how he made it....

What is the advantage for NOT using a mandrel?

17:50:12 From Dane Chandler -Tucson AZ to Everyone:
No chance of flexing when done between centers

Like Dane said, no eccentricity due to mandrel flex.

7.62x39 casings work as well, but I'd recommend using only brass ones. Most are steel and can be difficult for some to work with.
