Thanks Scott!

17:37:50 From Scott Hampton: Reacted to "Thanks Scott!" with

17:38:26 From Matt Harber - DAW - Highland, MI - Goblets!: Yep, that's who
I learned it from, watching Raffan's DVD....

17:39:03 From Ruby Cler: If you turn your scraper like that, you want to round the edge of the scraper so it doesn't mark your tool rest could you put a 45 degree angle on the side?

17:42:40 From Dane Chandler - Tucson AZ: If you have stock/cast toolrests, exactly. Higher end or modified toolrests with the nice m42 metal rod are not effected as they are harder than v10, m2, m35, & equivalent to M42 HSS tools.

17:42:59 From Scott Hampton: Reacted to "If you have stock/ca..." with

17:43:07 From Ruby Cler: Reacted to "If you have stock/ca..." with

17:44:41 From Ron Kisko: What is the best grind angle on say a 3/8 spindle gouge

17:45:02 From Scott Hampton: Replying to "If you turn your scr..."

Rounding the edge will work better. A flat 45 degree angle will not allow to adjust the angle of the cut.

17:45:07 From Kelly: Reacted to "Sent it Kelly" with

17:45:22 From Dane Chandler - Tucson AZ: Size doesn't matter Ron, it's the purpose you are using it for. For me, I prefer a 40°

17:45:28 From Ruby Cler: Replying to "What is the best gri..."

It depends on what you're turning. I leave a 45 on mine

17:45:37 From Dane Chandler - Tucson AZ: To 35°

17:45:47 From Ruby Cler: Reacted to "To 35°" with 17:50:44 From Matt Harber - DAW - Highland, MI - Goblets!: All that quilting usually comes from the tree base. Because the weight of the tree above it compresses and moves the base wood.

17:50:57 From Randy Smith - PA: I must go off to sleep; Setup for Mid Atlantic Woodturners Symposium tomorrow morning. <https://www.mawts.com/>

17:51:09 From Scott Hampton: Reacted to "I must go off to sle..." with

Use that technique, and cut in the quadrant of 9-11 and you will get a perfect finish, and no fret of a catch. Should you get aggressive, it will hardly be but a twist to the tool and the tiol wont mar the wood/blow up the piece as it would if done flat and on center.
