Under Texas law, it is illegal to have an open container of alcohol in the passenger area of a vehicle. This includes the glove compartment, center console, or anywhere else that is within reach of the driver or passengers. The only exception to this rule is if the open container is stored in the trunk of the car.

Sue, there was another incident about that same time period. Turner was using a wire wheel on the lathe to do some smoothing. He had a minor itch in one of his eyes but didn't think anything about it. The next morning he couldn't open his eye. Went to the hospital where they found that one of those wires had entered his eye and was lodged in the back of his eye. Of course he didn't understand how that could happen since he was wearing both safety glasses and a face shield. A couple weeks later, after he healed, he was taking a close look at his shield and found a tiny hole, right in front of the affected eye. He then checked his safety glasses and found another tiny hole directly in line with his eye. The piece of wire had come off the wheel at a high enough rate of speed to drill itself through both layers of protection and into his eye. All that to say we can never be too careful.

this is a great time to get on the list to share what you've been turning this week. Just say, "I have something to show" in the chat. Dane will call on you when its your turn.

Barbed "bait-saver" fish hooks made great ornament eyelets. Just cut the hook off, drill a small hole, and push the shaft in. The barbs on the shaft keep it from coming out.
